The Programme

The programme of the LL.M. in European Business Law is divided into two periods : courses take place from mid-September to the end of March, and then, students have 3 months to write a dissertation.

During the first period, there are two exam sessions :

December and at the end of March. The dissertation has to be handed in the end of June, students who want to write it in their country can do it, after the examinations.

The deliberations take place in the beginning of July, the students have their results after.

Courses

The lectures offered are grouped as follows :

- Comparative European Legal Systems
- European Litigation
- European Union Constitutional Law
- Economic Policies
- External Relations
- European Commercial Law
- European Company Law
- European Competition Law
- European Social Law
- European Tax Law

One French language module :

The students are divided into 2 specific groups (Beginners and Advanced) so as to improve their proficiency in French, and enable their French teachers to adjust the contents and the format of their courses to the actual level of the participants.

For each of the law modules, the students take an examination.

The official diploma is sent in November.

The courses (more than 200 hours) are taught in English.

French courses depend on the level of the students.

Seminars & Study trip

The lectures listed previously are complemented with professionally – oriented seminars

Legal practitioners (including solicitors from large international law-firms, European civil servants, university professors of various European origins, ...) are invited to lecture the students on highly specialised topics, such as the European Budget, the Intellectual Property, International Arbitration...

A one-week study trip is organised to « European capital cities » such as Brussels and Luxembourg. Visits of the different European Institutions are arranged (European Commission, European Court of Justice, European Parliament...).

The study trip is also an opportunity for students to improve their research for their dissertation in the Central Library of the European Commission.

Assessment

For each of the law modules, the students will take either a written or an oral exam. They will be awarded a grade out of 20.

Continuous assessment will be used for the French language module. The students will also have to draw up a report, under the supervision of one of the professors. This research work, meant to be about 50 pages long, will be handed in by late June, and awarded a grade out of 40.

To obtain their diploma, the students will have to get a grade point average superior to 10 out of 20.

All courses and seminars are obligatory, the regular attendance is taken into account.

Admission Procedures

Selection of applicants

Tuition fees have to be paid in September.

Europe-Asia Research Institute (EARI)

The EARI was founded by a decree dated from February 16, 1999. It aims to federate and develop the already significant relations which have traditionally existed with certain countries, like Japan, or which have been developed by Dean Christian Louit, particularly with China.

The relations between Europe and Asia have been considerably developed over the past few years. The evolution of the economic and political systems, as well as overall tendency for an opening onto the West, have led the members of the EARI team to join this global movement, by establishing privileged links with many Asian institutions, universities or departments of state, especially from China.

These relations, important as they are within the field of a system of law which is currently undergoing massive changes, are bound to expand to the others areas of the subjects taught in our university.

Where do they come from ?

The main activity of the EARI is the university cooperation with Asia, that is the reason why the students in LLM in European Business Law mainly come from numerous universities with which a partnership has been established.

However, in the aim to create an emulation thanks to the cultural diversity, the LLM welcomes also applicants from all over the world.
